

A Tale of Two Libraries

Video Transcript

[Video: The words "IU" on crimson banner left]

[Video: The word "DAY" on red banner right]

[Video: Two banners come together to form IU DAY banner]

[Words appear and encircle top and bottom of IU Day banner: ALL IU. ALL DAY.]

[Words appear on black film strip with IU DAY banner at top: CAMPUS GEMS: IU SOUTHEAST, A TALE OF TWO LIBRARIES]

[Video: Man using a pencil points at a location on a blueprint.]

[Words appear: Plans for IU Southeast's current campus began in the 1960s.]

[Video: Building under construction]

[Words appear: The first building went up in 1971 and housed the campus library.]

[Video: Exterior view of IU Southeast's first campus library]

[Words appear: The building's exterior looks the same today...]

[Video: Inside view of the building]

[Words appear: But the inside is no longer home to the campus library.]

[Video: Open spaces with chairs and tables and students and professors walking through the area]

[Words appear: Hints of the old library remain though...]

[Video: View above two ceiling panels that have been removed]

[Words appear: You just have to climb into the ceiling to see them.]

[Video: Large square hanging light fixture in open area]

[Words appear: The mezzanine balcony that used to look like this...]

[Words appear: Is now hidden behind the ceiling tiles.]

[Video: Ducts and pipes]

[Words appear: The space contains mostly ductwork.]

[Video: Sculpture of a man's bust sitting on a pedestal behind some ductwork]

[Words appear: and a few surprises.]

[Video: Library Director Marty Rosen standing in an open space in the building]

[Words appear: Library Director Marty Rosen recalls the old library's charming quirks.]

[Video: Woman reaching for a book in the library stacks]

[Words appear: Like needing a flashlight to find books on the bottom shelves.]

[Video: Exterior view of the new library with beautiful, inviting rotunda-like entrance]

[Words appear: Happily, the library has a new well-lit home across campus.]

[Video: IU Southeast Library sign with words "Center for Cultural Resources, Institute for Learning and Teaching Excellence, 1600 Grenadier Drive"]

[Video: View inside the rotunda of the new library with book stacks in the background]

[Video: Image of very large IU Seal]

[Words appear: (that seal is the largest on any IU campus)]

[Video: Library Director Marty Rosen engaged in conversation with book stacks in the background]

[Words appear: When the building opened in 2005, a few items from the old library made the move...]

[Video: Scan of book stacks]

[Words appear: Books of course...]

[Video: Two bird figurines perched on a branch with orange berries.]

[Video: More figurines of birds in a glass case.]

[Words appear: These fine-feathered figurines...

[Video: Original card catalogue or shelf list]

[Words appear: And this shelf list—now just a cool artifact since the collection went digital.]

[Video: Hand displaying a card filed in a drawer of the card catalogue]

[Video: Old photo of two administrators talking inside the old library while it was still under construction]

[Video: Old photo of class of school-age children sitting on the floor in a group in the old library listening to the librarian]

[Words appear: From old to new, IU Southeast's libraries remind us...]

[Video: View of the new well-lit library's first floor conversation areas from the second-floor balcony, where brightly colored flags hang]

[Video: Exterior view of the new library with beautiful, inviting rotunda-like entrance]

[Words appear: The past is always with us (maybe even in the ceiling above our heads).]

[Words appear on black film strip with IU DAY banner at top: CAMPUS GEMS: IU SOUTHEAST, A TALE OF TWO LIBRARIES]

[Transcript ends.]